The Index in this book refers to the actual 1840 Census -- NOT this book.

EXPLANATION

As is frequently the case with handwriting of a century or more ago, the census enumeration for Lauderdale County in 1840 is often difficult, sometimes impossible, to read. Much has been said about the "beauty" of old penmanship; but I have had a fair exposure to it, and my opinion of it is not very high. It can be very beautiful and yet quite illegible. Frequently it seems to be not so much actual writing as mere exercises in calligraphy, the pushes, pulls, and curves used to form letters. But with this 1840 census the problem has been not with beautiful illegibility but rather with simply poor, careless handwriting. How often I was in a quandary in transcribing these names! Even where I don't place a question mark I was often not completely certain. The writing of one of the scribes was especially poor. The same letter was not always written consistently, capital J's and I's were often identical, and a slight deviation in an otherwise straight line could be any of at least half a dozen letters.

Although I have retained the original page numbers, I have also assigned each name a number as a point of reference for the index at the end, an arrangement that makes it possible to keep the original order of the listing to give a clue to neighborhoods.

I have tried to avoid guessing at names, even in cases that seemed probable or even obvious to me where the enumerator wrote something else. I prefer to try to write the names exactly as the census taker did. The spellings in many cases were almost certainly wrong, but I'd rather let each person using this index solve such problems as best he can. Also, for all I know the person interviewed may actually have used such a spelling. Besides, this copy can't begin to obviate the need to refer occasionally to the original. I hope, however, that this transcription will make the 1840 census for Lauderdale more useful than it would otherwise be.

Everything that the census enumerator recorded for Lauderdale County in 1840 is included in this record. However, other than the heads of families and the tallies for every other individual, free and slave, there are only a few data, and these have been put into special notes. In addition, at the end of the report, in the "recapitulation" there are mentioned the following, not all of which seem to be included in the body of the report:

"White persons under 14 years deaf and dumb"	- 1
Ditto "Upwards of 25"	- 1
"Insane and idiots at private charge"	- 5

An examination of the official compendium of the 1840 census (Sixth Census or Enumeration of the Inhabitants of the United States, as Corrected at the Department of State, in 1840. Washington: Published by Blair and Rives, 1841, pages 252-253) shows that, in agreement with my findings when I examined the enumeration, there were no county data on such things as occupations, industry, or schools. There seems also to be a slight discrepancy between what the official compendium gives as the total population and that given in the basic enumeration. For example, the former gives the total white males and females as 2,136 and 1,856 respectively, while the personal enumeration gives the white male and female tally as 2,138 and 1,891. I leave to those whose curiosity is greater than mine the pleasure of going to the basic enumeration to recheck the arithmetic. The compendium also made no mention of deaf, dumb, and blind, although the enumeration did have some information (albeit contradictory) on that. The official digest gives the total of free blacks as thirteen though I count fourteen. For the slave population the official count is 609 males and 744 females, a total of 1,353 slaves.
