By Howard Hagwood. The Tennessee Trace: A Family's Journey is an historical account of the Martin family who settled along a frontier trading path known locally as the Tennessee Trace in eastern Mississippi after the Treaty of Dancing Rabbit Creek in 1830. Norman Martin, Sr. was appointed during the administration of Governor Hiram Runnels to serve on a commission to establish counties in eastern Mississippi in 1833. Martin is the only member of the commission who is known to have lived in Lauderdale County. Martin served on the first governing board of both Lauderdale and Clarke counties and continued to live along the Tennessee Trace in Causeyville until his death in 1883. The history of the Tennessee Trace and the role of the Martin family in the settlement of eastern Mississippi are traced in the book from the territorial era through the early years of the twentieth century.
