 This is the record on which Helen Lowry Meador enrolled in DARs

Helen Lowry Meador is descended in the following line from Robert Lowry who was born in Chesterfield District S.C. about the year 1730 and died in Chesterfield District in 1800. His place of residence during the war of the Revolution was Cheraw, Chesterfield District, S.C.

Helen Lowry Meador was born in the village of Marion, county of Lauderdale, State of Mississippi. She is the daughter of Joseph Lowry and his wife Emma Clinton. Joseph Lowry was the son of John Lowry, born about 1758, and his wife Temperance Rushing, who were married about 1800. John Lowry was the son of Robert Lowry the First, born about 1730 and died about December 1800, and his wife Judith May who were married in Chesterfield District, South Carolina, about the year 1750.

Ancestor's Services

Robert Lowry, the First, assisted in establishing American Independence in the War of the Revolution, acting in the capacity of private in Gen. Marion's Brigade during the years of 1781 and 1782. This record is found in Gregg's History of Old Cheraw, page 410. The records of this History also show on page 179 that during the year of 1775 Robert Lowry was elected as Overseer of the Poor in the Chesterfield District at Cheraw and that during the year of 1777 he was elected as a Vestryman of the Episcopal Church at Cheraw. A footnote on this same page states that the Lowry family settled in the upper part of what is now known as the Chesterfield District, "A name long and respectively known in its history". The author also states that he held the office of Justice of the Peace of Chesterfield District. John Lowry, his son, served as a soldier among the South Carolina Troops. Proof of service is found in Salley's Stub Entries to Indents for South Carolina Revolutionary claims, book R-T, page 274; it is stated that he received pay from the state of South Carolina for military service during the War of the Revolution, to the amount of ten pounds, four shillings and three and one-quarter pence.

Robert Lowry, the First, of Chesterfield District, South Carolina was married to Judith May about the year 1750. To this union were born five children; Nancy Lowry, who married John Blakeney, Susannah Lowry who married Thomas Blakeney, Judith Lowry who married a man by the name of Boggan, Abner Lowry who married Elizabeth Miller, and John Lowry who married Temperance Rushing.

These are notes taken from the papers of Miss Emma Dicken, but she did not say if she had proof of same.

Joseph Lowry married Emma Clinton. Her mother was Emma Leigh of Kentucky. Emma Clinton's great uncle was DeWitt Clinton.

Sketches of the Clintons in the National Cyclopedia say that the first American ancestor was Charles Clinton, born in County Longford, Ireland, son of James Clinton whose father was William Clinton, one of the most devoted adherents of Charles the First. Charles Clinton married in 1779 and with his wife, (name not given), joined a party of Colonists and sailed for America, landing at Cape Cod. The next spring he removed to Ulster County, New York, fought in the Old French War, was a justice of the Peace and Judge of the Common Pleas Court of his county.

DeWitt Clinton, who was Governor of New York from 1817 to 1822 and from 1824-1827 was born in Little Brittain, Ulster County, New York (now Orange County), and was descended from Charles Clinton, above mentioned.

Joseph Clinton, father of Emma Clinton lived at Marion, Miss. and was quite a wealthy man. He had very large land holdings, as well as slaves and other property. The following is on tombstones in the Marion Cemetery.

Joseph Clinton	Sarah A. Clinton	Emma E. Lowry
Nov. 23 1804	Born May 24 1818	March 29 1828
Oct. 28 1877	Died Nov. 24 1881	Nov. 24 1863
(At Old Marion Cemetery, 2 $\frac{1}{2}$ miles east of Marion Station.)		(Barker Cemetery, 2 miles N.W. Marion)

From "Field Book of the Revolution", Footnote pages 272 and 273 Vol I.

"James Clinton was born in Ulster County, New York, August 9, 1736. At the age of twenty (1756) he was Captain under Bradstreet in the attack on Ft. Frontenac. In 1763 he was intrusted with the command of four companies in Ulster and Orange raised for defense against the inroads of the savages. He with his brother George (the Governor of New York during the Revolution) early espoused the patriot cause. He was appointed a Colonel in 1775 and accompanied Montgomery to Canada. In August 1776 he was made a Brigadier and was in command under Governor Clinton at Forts Montgomery and Clinton when they fell into the hands of the enemy in 1777. He escaped and made his way to his residence in safety. Conjointly with Sullivan, he led the expedition against the Indians in 1779. During the remainder of the war he was connected with the Northern Department, having his headquarters at Albany. He retired to his estate near Newberg, Orange County, New York, after the Revolution, where he died Dec. 22 1812, aged seventy-five years. He was the father of DeWitt Clinton, the eminent Governor of New York in 1826-27."

Joseph Clinton of Marion, Miss., was born Nov. 23, 1806, died Oct. 23 1877. We do not know the lineage of Joseph Clinton certainly, but it may have been James, William or John Clinton. John once lived at Shelbyville, Tenn. John Clinton's mother was said to have been Edith Carroll, related to Charles Carroll, of Carrollton. (Family traditions say that the family were connected to the Carroll who signed the Declaration of Independence.)

John Clinton married Mary Lay who lived at Greensboro, Ala. daughter of Amos Lay. There was a family by the name of Lay in Cherokee County, Ala. John Clinton appears to have been the son of James Clinton.

One William Carroll moved from North Carolina to Coffee County, Tenn. with two brothers, Jack and Aaron, also another brother (name unknown). They probably came from Beaufort, N.C. Thomas and John Carroll were in the Assembly in N. Carolina, and there were others by that name in the state. When a census was taken of all Revolutionary soldiers living in 1840 the census gave William Clinton living in Campbell county, Ga., eighty years of age. This was no doubt the son of Richard Clinton of North Carolina, as he would have been born in 1760.

Ulster County, New York, Probate Record.

Charles Clinton, son of James Clinton of County Corbay, Longford, Ireland, married Elizabeth Dennison, sailed for Philadelphia May 20, 1729 in the "George and Ann" settled in Ulster County at the precinct of the Highlands, was County Judge of Ulster County. Issue- Catherine, married Col. James McClaughry; Mary, died on the passage; Alexander, born April 28, 1732; Charles, a surgeon, died 1781, age 56; James, the General, born August or September 1736, married 1765 Mary, daughter of Egbert DeWitt, died Dec. 22, 1812, father of Gov. DeWitt Clinton; George, born July 26, 1739, married Feb. 7 1770 Cornelia Tappen, father was a surveyor, first Governor of New York, vice president of U.S.

(The above notes were obtained by Miss Emma Dicken)

From a Sketch of Gov. Robert Lowry

Governor Lowry was born in Chesterfield District, South Carolina, March 10, 1831. He was a son of Robert Lowry, born in 1806 in South Carolina, an old and prominent family of Scotch-Irish descent. John Lowry was Grandfather of the Governor, one time a State Senator.

The elder Robert Lowry married Jemima Rushing of North Carolina. About 1833 they moved to the Western District of Tennessee. In 1840 moved to Tishominga County, Miss. His wife died in 1840 and he married second Sarah E. Lewellen and had six children. Mr. Lowry died in 1880. At the age of thirteen the Governor went to live with his uncle, Judge James Lowry in Smith County, a merchant. Robert was elected Governor of Mississippi in 1881 and was re-elected in 1885.

During the Civil War, Sherman's troops were camped at Marion for a time. They destroyed almost everything. They burned down the general store belonging to Joseph Lowry. He had bought $5,000 worth of merchandise which had just arrived, but for which he had not paid. After the war was over he went to work traveling for a cotton firm in Mobile and managed before his death in 1869 to repay every cent that he owed.

Knowing that the soldiers would soon be on them, Joseph Lowry had the negroes to dig a deep hole straight down through the center of the big manure pile in the lot. Into it they lowered a well-wrapped box containing the family's supply of meat. It was covered over with dirt then the manure was again piled over it, taking care that no fresh dirt was isible. Helen, who was at the lot watching the yankees run down and catch the chickens belonging to the family, in her excitement began to jump up and down, saying "Here is where we --", but she got no further as the big black hand of a faithful slave sent her rolling, thereby keeping her from revealing the hiding place of the precious meat. They said that the thing that hurt the most about the yankees getting the chickens was that the family dog joined in the fun and helped to catch the chickens.

Grandpa Lowry was a Mason, so after watching the yankees burn his store, round up all his livestock and chickens and burn the cotton, he went to the headquarters of the commanding officer and in a short time came back with a guard who watched the home as long as troops were stationed there. A great many troops were quartered in that immediate vicinity and on into Meridian. They told of a part of Sherman's army marching through from Vicksburg, said to be an army of 30,000. They passed all day and all night.

After his father's death Waldo Lowry took over and managed to educate all four of his sisters. All the girls were considered beautiful.

Alexine married C.W. Cheers. He was Commercial Agent for the Central of Georgia Railroad in Chattanooga, afterwards transferring to Atlanta, Ga.

Annie Lowry married C.W. Charles. He was a clerk in the Freight Depot in Meridian. She died in Meridian. After Mr. Charles' death, she and Miss Sallie Battaile, of "Destrict Skule" fame lived together until her death. She is buried in Rose Hill cemetery.

Helen Lowry married Will Meador, brother of Josh Meador of Marion. He was for a number of years Agent for the Mobile and Ohio Railroad in Corinth, Miss. He then moved to Greenwood, Miss., where he was Agent for the Southern Railroad.

Rosa Lowry married Louis Mannahan who worked in a railroad office in Shreveport, La.

We have no records of the children of these families.

Salem, N.C. might be considered the cradle of the southern family of Holland in this country. The founder of this family was John Holland, one of the first settlers of Salem, N.C. One of his descendants was William Holland who was the father of Rev. Francis Raymond Holland, a Moravian minister who went out to Jamaica as a missionary and Principal of a school for training native ministers. Later he became a Presbyterian minister and still later left off preaching and became a Professor of Zoology. His wife was Elizabeth Augusta Wolle, daughter of Jacob Wolle, of Bethlehem, Pa. and a member of the distinguished Moravian Wolle family. While in Jamaica, their son William Jacob Holland was born in 1818. He was a naturalist of distinction.

Another distinguished member of the North Carolina family of Holland was James Holland, born in Tryon County, N.C. in 1754. He was married to Sarah, daughter of William Gilbert of Gilberttown, afterward Rutherford N.C. James Holland was active in the Revolution and afterward served in the fourth, seventh, eighth, ninth, tenth and eleventh congresses. While serving his fifth term in congress, he sent his family, his household goods and his slaves under the direction of his son, William Blount Holland to take possession of a grant of 5,000 acres of land at Holland's Ferry, Tenn. The estate joined another 5,000 acres belonging to his father-in-law. Here he settled, on retiring from life in Washington. He was generally known as Major Holland.

Holland Notes

Thomas Holland (Grandpa Holland) told of how his father liked to pit his strength as a prizefighter against a worthy opponent. In those days they wore no gloves and it was a case of bare hands and skill. He said that his father enjoyed the sport so much that he had been known to walk a hundred miles to fight a worthy adversary.

Grandpa Holland was a large man, over six feet tall. He was reared by an uncle after the death of his father and mother and he often told of his uncle's patting him on the head and telling him "Someday you will be a rich man, Tommy". However this did not materialize.

In his young days he went down into Louisiana for quite a while where he had many exciting experiences. He returned to Alabama and married Miss Sarah Jane Davis of Fayette County, Alabama.

He was a veteran of the Mexican War, and served throughout the Civil War. He was a Major in the Confederate Army. He told of being sent to Mississippi and Alabama to round up conscript dodgers, and was shot at several times, but always escaped. He was also known as Squire Holland.

They told it that he always slept in his underwear, and it was his habit to leave his drawers unbuttoned. One night he waked to see a large negro at the foot of his bed. He jumped out of bed but before he had taken more than a step or two his drawers slipped down and hobbled him, causing him to fall. The man made good his escape. He probably would have been taken to pieces if it had not been for the accident as Grandpa was a powerful man. There was no question as to the negro's intent as he had a baseball bat in his hand when Grandpa saw him. The negro, in his haste to get away, dropped the bat and it was kept in the family for years.

Grandpa Holland knew that his people had come from North Carolina, but he had no definite knowledge of them.

Mayor Tom Holland was Postmaster at Marion for many years. Mrs. Sarah Davis (Mrs. Tom) Holland was loved by all who knew her. She was always spoken of as a "saint on earth".

Rev. Brogan was educated in Ireland to become a Catholic priest. One day by chance he came into possession of a New Testament. He read it with interest, then studied it carefully and changed his mind completely. His family was so infuriated that they even threatened his life if he did not give up his new beliefs. He slipped away from them and came to America. Two brothers followed him, but he came south and eluded them.

While he was fresh from Ireland and had not become entirely familiar with our ways he was one day eating dinner with the family. He with much delight ate the corn from the cob and passed it back to the hostess asking that she would put some more corn on the cob.

It was his custom in the summer time to lean a straight chair against a post of the porch early on Sunday morning and study his Bible in a last minute polish to his sermons. Young Ed, his son, owned a rather vicious goat. No one knew for certain but young Ed certainly got the blame and the punishment for letting the goat out of his pen on this particular Sunday morning, but the first thing that the Rev. Brogan knew, that goat got a good running start and butted him, chair and all, out into the yard. Of course his fresh white shirt and "Sunday" pants were ruined with dust. Young Ed got well dusted, too.

Burt Lowry remembers going with his mother when he was quite a small child, to Vosburg to visit "Aunt Matt". He remembers that she was a large woman, and that she had a millinery store in her yard. He was permitted to climb up on a fence post to watch for the train to come. It was almost time for it, and a small boy who didn't get to see a train often just didn't have time to get down and run behind the house although the results were rather dampening!

This store was probably the inspiration for Sallie Lowry's saying one day that she knew what she was going to be when she grew up, she was "going to be a millinery store".
