William Henry Pendarvis

River Boat Pilot

In very early Mobile records, there are several Pendarvises mentioned. In the death records there are 4 women named for the time period of the yellow fever epidemic. There was Emily Pendarvis age 10 who died August 3, 1825. Catherine Pendarvis, age 50, died August 9th, 1825. Margaret Pendarvis died October 18th, 1825, and Harriet who was 22 years old died September 18, 1826. Also, in a later sexton's report there is a James A. Pendarvis, born in South Carolina who dies of paralysis on November 29, 1851. He was 43 years old. He is buried at Magnolia Cemetery, Lot 43, Square 5. We do not know how these people relate to William Henry Pendarvis.

William Henry Pendarvis was born in 1805 in South Carolina. He was the son of John Pendarvis (brother of Richard Lambright Pendarvis of Wayne County, Georgia) who was the son of Josiah Pendarvis and Sarah Bedon of Colleton county, South Carolina. William Henry's youngest brother James Washington Pendarvis settled in the Irvington/Bayou La Batre, Alabama area in the 1850's.

William Henry's first marriage was to Rebecca Glase on March 3, 1825 in Mobile, Alabama. In June 1854, William Henry married a widow named Catherine Elizabeth Williams Fettus. This marriage took place in Mobile County, also.

Captain William Henry Pendarvis is first mentioned in the Mobile City Directory in 1837. His steamboat was the "Louis Cass". He resided at St. Louis and North Bayou. In 1838, the manifest of the steamboat "Emblem", with Pendarvis listed as Master from Columbus, was 5 bales of cotton and 16 passengers. By 1842 he was the captain of the steamboat "W. W. Fry". According to the "Mobile Register", May 1st, 1848, the steamboat "Selma" with Pendarvis as captain came into Mobile from Wetumpka with 122 bales of cotton.

In the 1859 city directory, William Henry Pendarvis is listed as a steamboatsman, residing on St. Francis Street. In the household with him is W. A. Pendarvis who was employed at the Phoenix Foundry. According to probate records, at the Mobile County Court House, on February 14th, 1853, Amanda Foster dies leaving all of her worldly goods to William A. Pendarvis, a minor. In 1855 court records, William Henry states that he has had guardianship of William A. Pendarvis, an orphan, since 1839. William Henry died on May 6th, 1860 at the age of 55. He is buried at Magnolia Cemetery Lot 43, Square 5. In 1865 and in 1866, William A. Pendarvis and William Henry's widow, Catherine Elizabeth, lived at the residence of Charles B. Barnard and Anna Williams Barnard, Catherine's sister, in the city of Mobile. Charles and Anna had been married in earlier times at the home of Captain William Henry Pendarvis. In 1869 and in 1870, William A. Pendarvis is listed as a watchman for Morgan Line Steamers. William A. Pendarvis who was born in South Carolina died July 11th, 1870 at the age of 28. He is buried at Magnolia Cemetery Lot 43, Square 5.

Huey Melton's Memories in La Salle Parish

Mr. Huey Melton worked on the railroad, which was begun in 1937. He loaded piling, driving mules in the woods, and worked at Camp Polk a while.

He attended the Northwestern College. then known as the La. Normal School. He wrote some articles for the Winnfield paper, and raised cattle, etc. He has two vegetables gardens, and has fond memories of his days in LaSalle Parish.

He speaks of his uncle J.F. Forsythe who kept goats, raised tobacco, and about his Uncle Bowie on Trout, Creek. He told of when he was 7 or 8 years old, getting some homegrown tobacco twists, and trying a bit of it. Said he was so sick he never tried it again.

He told fond tales of the two-story hotel in Zenoria, La. and the commissary located next to it. It was located near the railroad, but no sign of it in 1987.

He said his Uncle Bowie was a Tennessee log cutter, and visited often at the house.

He was a school bus driver. In 1976 he had a stroke, but still oversees his farm.

Johnie and Kathryn (Pendarvis) Maxwell

Cyrus Lamont ran away to sea at age 14 from Bayonne, France, arriving in Louisiana in the late 1700s. At age 25, he went back to France. Finding his properties taken by the crown, he once again returned to Louisiana. In New Orleans, he met and married a Miss Louis, whose parents were among the Acadians exiled from Nova Scotia. Their only daughter, Catherine (b. 1839), married Nathan Tisdale, a ship carpenter.

The Tisdales originally came from the Lees (?) River in Scotland to South Carolina where they had been granted land. They eventually moved to AL, then MS, and finally New Orleans. Nathan's father, Joseph Wade, married Amelia Mary Wilson, whose family had a plantation near Mobile. Amelia was a school teacher and an artist.

Nathan and Catherine moved first to Jackson and then to Winn Parish. They had 9 children. The oldest daughter, Adelaide Cornelia (b. 1 June 1861, d. 25 May 1925). married Benjamin Franklin Pendarvis (b. 27 Oct 1858, d. 1 Mar 1912), a country school teacher and farmer.

The Pendarvises, originally from England, first settled in Carolina and then in Pike County, MS, where Will Pendarvis married Hatawa, a Choctaw Indian. One of their sons, William, married a Miss Ziegler, and they had 8 children. Their third son, Benjamin Henry (b. 29 Jan 1818, d. 23 June 1899), moved to Jackson Parish and then to Castor Creek near Tullos in Catahoula (now LaSalle) Parish, where he bought 1000 acres of land ran a steamboat landing and cotton gin.

Benjamin H. first married a Miss Tullos and after her death, he married Annie Elizabeth Cox (b. 19 Sept 1832, d. 9 Sept 1903), whose father was Zacharia Cox, a Baptist preacher and plantation owner in Jackson Parish. Benjamin H. and Annie E. had 9 children, the eldest being Benjamin Franklin.

To Benjamin F. and Adelaide (Tisdale) were born 10 children including Kathryn Estelle (b. 18 Jan 1892, d. 10 July 1979). Kathryn was born in Tullos and attended Johnie William was born in Grant Paras west of Rochelle. His parents were William Henry (b. 14 Feb 1859) and Eliza Jan (Stringer) Maxwell and his grandparent Collier Allen (b. 23 Dec 1837, in MS, d. 22 No. 1892) and Elizabeth (Cockerham) Maxwell (b. circa 1826, d. circa 1895), settled on Dugdemona where they ran a ferry called Maxwell's Ferry. Collier Allen served as private in the 1st Louisiana Calvary Scout and the 2nd Louisiana Calvary during the Civil War.

Johnie W. and Kathryn lived in Rochelle where Johnie worked for the Tremont Mill They had 6 children: Vonnie Vee (b. 3 Jan 1919), Max William (b. 29 Mar 1920), Oleta Pearl (b. 6 June 1921), Kathren Merle (b. 18 May 1923, d. 10 July 1986), Johnny Waldo (6 Mar 1925), and Herbert Glennister (b. 16 Dec 1927).

When the children were young, Johnie and Kathryn moved to West Carroll Parish to farm. In 1941, they moved to Tullos where they remained the rest of their lives. Johnie first ran a service station and then a magneto and waco repair shop. Kate was a housewife and wrote poetry.

Vonnie and Pearl graduated from LTU and became school teachers. Kathren became a housewife, music teacher, and eventually church secretary. The boys all served in WWII, Max in the Air Force and Johnny and Glennister in the Navy. Max went to LTU and later became state manager for an insurance company, a state representative, and an independent oil man. Johnny graduated from LTU and became an engineer for a large electronics firm. Glennister became a carpenter and cabinet maker.

The Pendarvis Family

The Pendarvis Family is of English descent with the earliest American branch leaving Cornwall, England and settling in South Carolina in the 1600's. James Washington Pendarvis was born in South Carolina on February 7, William Henry (Will) Pendarvis, Jr.

South Carolina on February 7, 1817. He arrived in Mobile County some time before the 1850 census. He purchased 80 acres of land in south Mobile County in August of 1858, where he built his home in September of that year. Through the Homestead Act, James acquired 180 additional acres in the same vicinity, where he had fruit and pecan orchards.

James Pendarvis married Jane Harriet Davis, a widow, on February 3, 1862. Family tradition states that Jane Harriet was of Choctaw Indian descent. She was born on Honey Island, off of the Louisiana coast May 3, 1821.

James was the father of four children. William Henry: b. April16, 1851, d. December 31, 1926. James 1851, d. December 31, 1926. James Washington: Jr., b. February of 1855, d. August 1917. Nancy Jane "Nana": b. August 31, 1857, d. (?). Mary Francis: b. October 7, 1861, d. January 3, 1944.

James was a skilled blacksmith, and a charter member of the First Baptist Church of Bayou La Batre. He also served with the

Robert Lee Pendarvis

Mobile volunteers during the Civil War. According to Civil War records, James was five foot six inches tall, had gray eyes and light hair. On October 1, 1888, James was hit and severely injured by an L&N train at the Fowl River Station. He later died at his home in Pleasant Progress. Pleasant Progress was a community a few miles north of Bayou La Batre and is now known as Irvington. James and Jane Harriet are both buried in Bayou La Batre at the Odd Fellow's Cemetery.

James' first son, William Henry Pendarvis, married Martha Jane Daily April 21, 1873. They had seven children: Mary Jane (Molly), born 1873; Martha Elizabeth (Lizzie), born 1875; died 1909; Nancy Belle, born 1877, died 1926; Thomas Jefferson (Tom), born 1878, died 1954; William Henry, Jr. (Will), born 1880, died 1958; Robert Lee (Rob), born 1881, died 1973; and Stella Oceona, born 1882, died 1964. William Henry's second wife was Mary Ann Myers. They had two children.

Will was a carpenter and farmer. He was a man who was very gentle, with a calm and peaceful manner. He never raised his voice. He married Madeline Tillman on September 16, 1911. They had one son, Freddie Wilson. Will died in 1958.

Rob was a farmer and a well known trainer of bird dogs. He had a good sense of humor and he was a great storyteller. Rob married Viola Callaway on April 28, 1906. They had six children. Viola died at an early age during the flu epidemic. Robert never remarried, and he raised his children alone.

Both Will and Rob were avid hunters who not only enjoyed the sport, but they supplied food for family and neighbors. They were famous for their bear-hunting stories. One night Will, Tom, Rob, and Will's son, Freddie, took their 'coon dogs hunting. They were armed only with an axe to chop down a tree to capture racoons. The smaller dog was named Jack. The larger dog was named Blue. The men heard a commotion at the edge of the swamp! The dogs were ahead, yelping and barking. The bright moonlight allowed them to see Blue running frantically towards them, hoping for protection against a large black bear that was chasing him. Will stood waving his axe as he hollered for Tom and Rob to retreat home. The large bear raised up on his hind legs, just a few feet from the men. Fortunately, the bear decided to avoid conflict, and she returned to her cubs. Three days later, Jack struggled home, badly injured, but he was nursed back to health to hunt with the Pendarvis men again.

These men were known to have killed the largest bear that was ever seen in southern Alabama. It is said that the skin of this bear is now the property of the Smithsonian Institute.

Some family members still live on the original land that was granted to James Pendarvis, and some of the family still has the original land grant papers.
